PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

THE need of a handbook of some kind to assist in the labor of compiling the weekly service-list in a suitable and conscientious manner has been observed so generally on the part of organists, choirmasters and clergy, that I venture to bring to their notice this attempt to meet the requirement, in the hope that it may be found both acceptable and useful.

It will be seen that the object is to show comprehensively, without the necessity of spending further time and labor in searching elsewhere, what hymns and anthems are suitable for every Sunday or other occasion.

In making the selection, the plan adopted has been, after perusal of the collect, epistle and gospel, together with the proper lessons for the day, to fix upon the particular subjects which it has been intended by the compilers of the prayer-book and the lectionary to bring to the attention of the Church, and to further this object by selecting such hymns and anthems as appear to reflect and emphasize the same or analogous subjects.

I trust that an intelligent use of the book may, at the end of the day's worship, produce an impression of that general consistency throughout the services which is undoubtedly helpful to the earnest and devout worshipper, but which is often disturbed by the introduction of hymns and anthems either having no connection with the occasion, or being sometimes at variance with it.

Such further indications have been inserted as would appear to be useful. I shall be glad to receive any corrections and observations from those who use the book, in view of its improvement if a further edition should be called for.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

A NEW edition of this handbook having been called for, opportunity has been taken to revise the former one in view of adding to its usefulness. The number of hymns and anthems for each day has been greatly increased, the most recently published anthems having been included, and various tables and lists have been added. These comprise a table of contents, and tables of the movable and other feasts and of the Saints' days, together with lists of anthems suitable to be sung without accompaniment, others for men's voices only, and some for which orchestral parts have been written.

I have to thank several correspondents who have taken an interest in the handbook by sending me suggestions, of which I have availed myself in this edition.

MALLINSON RANDALL.

Pottstown, Pa., January, 1911.

INTRODUCTION

EVERY clergyman knows the difficulty of selecting suitable hymns for the services, and is also aware of the importance of having these and the anthems that are to be sung bear some relation to the teachings of the day's services. Unity in the different parts of a service is most desirable. There is a tendency even with conscientious and painstaking clergymen to fall into the habit of repeating a comparatively small number of hymns rather than to spend time in seeking others which would be more appropriate and equally well known.

I have been most fortunate in having with me for over ten years as my organist and choirmaster one whose interest in the service and appreciation of its spiritual benefits are as great as his ability in his technical work.

I am not without hope and belief that Mr. Randall's experience at St. Andrew's, where the appointment of hymns and anthems is conscientiously and carefully made, has been helpful to him in this compilation, which now goes forth to the public with my most cordial commendation and belief that it will prove especially valuable to the clergy, upon whom is imposed primarily the responsibility of ordering the services of the Church.

GEORGE R. VAN DE WATER,

Rector of St. Andrew's Church, New York.
